North Carolinians from the proposed route of the Atlantic Coast Pipeline will travel to Raleigh March 26-28 to protest damage that is already being done to homes and property by construction crews of the pipeline company. The protesters' target is Governor Roy Cooper, whose administration issued state water permits in late January that allowed construction to begin.

Tom Clark, an impacted landowner from the Eastover community of Cumberland County, will lead a daily protest vigil. Recently, loggers employed by Dominion Energy and Duke Energy cut down many trees on his family's land including "the grandfather tree," a century-old family landmark.

Now in its 30th year, NC WARN's mission urgency is to induce Charlotte-based Duke Energy – now the world's largest corporate utility – to make a strong shift to clean, affordable energy in order to stem pollution's damage to communities, and to help avert climate tipping points and ongoing rate hikes.
